ASUNTO: Ruling on Petitioner's Motion for Extension of Time.

RESOLUTION

On April 3, 2019, the Petitioner, Marc Bejarano, filed before the Energy Bureau of the Puerto Rico Public Services Regulatory Board ("Energy Bureau") a document titled "Motion"<sup>1</sup> requesting an extension of time, of no less than ten (10) days, to comply with the March 15, 2019 Order in the instant case. Such order required the Petitioner to express his position regarding the Puerto Rico Electric Power Authority's "Motion in Compliance of Order and Requesting Final Closing of the Case". In its Motion, the Petitioner argues that he contacted the Independent Consumer Protection Office ("ICPO") and is waiting for certain information from ICPO in order to comply with the March 15, 2019 Order.<sup>2</sup>

On April 4, 2019, PREPA filed a document titled "Motion in Opposition of Extension of Time"<sup>3</sup> requesting the Energy Bureau to consider there is a total absence of just cause in this case to request an extension of time. In support of its argument PREPA argued that the Petitioner is currently representing himself and that attorneys from the ICPO office have not assumed legal representation of Petitioner.<sup>4</sup> For this reason, PREPA argues that the responsibility of complying with the Energy Bureau's orders falls on Petitioner only.<sup>5</sup> Therefore, according to PREPA, "any delay attribute to the attention given to this case by a third party not involved in any form in this case, does not constitute just cause to provide an extension of time for petitioner to comply with the Bureau's order."<sup>6</sup>

After considering Petitioner and PREPA's arguments, the Energy Bureau DETERMINES that Petitioner didn't show just cause for such extension, therefore the requested time extension is DENIED.
